How can you understand your city more deeply? This exhibition presents the ways in which the Indianapolis-based informal collective We Are City has answered that question over the past two years. At the center of this show are the products of We Are City's artist-in-residence program, which has brought six internationally active artists into conversation with Indianapolis residents. Featuring these artists' visual, audio, linguistic, and material responses to their time in Indianapolis, as well as other documentation of We Are City's activities, [EXPORT] shares the group's city engagement efforts with a new audience in Columbus.

[EXPORT] is curated by Laura Holzman, Public Scholar of Curatorial Practices and Visual Art at IUPUI. It features work by Oliver Blank, Jace Clayton, William Zoe FitzGerald, James A. Reeves, Rocio Salceda, and Matthew Skjonsberg.

ABOUT WE ARE CITY

The goal of We Are City is to connect and inform the people and organizations that are making their city a better place to live in. Since 2012, the group's activities have been structured around three main programs: [IMPORT], an artist residency, [BRIEFING], a twice-a-week, five-minute summary of city-building news from Indianapolis and around the world, and [SUMMIT], an annual conference in which thinkers and doers present on the challenges and rewards of urban living. ABOUT IUCA+D

The IU Center for Art + Design is an initiative of Indiana University in unique collaboration with the city of Columbus to develop and promote the comprehensive integration of art and design with the city. The architecture, art, parks, and public spaces of Columbus are the "living laboratories" for the center and its various programs of design study.
